

Busy physiotherapist: Time is short, so every extra minute for the patient is precious.

The physiotherapist saves precious time – for the benefit of patients: The xcouch physiotherapy couch is an important help when Helle Andersen is treating her patients – Each day a total of 30 minutes of valuable extra time is saved on the setup, moving, cleaning and adjustment of the couch during therapy.

A treatment bench – developed by therapists

With Helle Andersen there are five teams of physiotherapists and occupational therapists, who every day has to run really fast. Every minute counts, but for Helle and her colleagues it's essential that each patient is treated efficient and individually. Bjørn Windingstad from Oslo knows all about this – Therefore he and his brother Baard, both physiotherapists, have developed and designed xcouch – in cooperation with the Danish factory Scaniro in Fjerritslev.

More freedom and workspace for the therapist

“There must not be wasted any unnecessary time on impractical handling – such as turning their backs on the patient and grapple with a handle that is stuck. So I was really happy for our 10 new xcouch physiotherapy couches” says Helle, adding: “My colleagues have the same experience – the 5 minutes I gain on one patient with xcouch becomes at least 30 minutes daily and it's worth gold”.

Bjørn Windingstad adds: “We have made about 80% of all types of treatment possible on one couch, which can be divided into 2-3-5 parts and is equipped specifically for clinical, osteopathic or physiotherapy treatments.”

” - I waste no time, the couch is easy, silent and quick to operate... ”

Helle Andersen, physiotherapist